

KATE RHODES

In Further Afield, Kate Rhodes abandons the cartography of place for the topography of feeling, where Morocco's heat, India's unique rhythm, and the light of France are transformed through the layers of memory into landscapes that exist nowhere but everywhere at once.

Balancing on the threshold between representation and abstraction, Rhodes' confident vulnerability invites us to wander not through the places she has been but through the emotional geographies those journeys have carved within her, emerging as visual poems speaking in the universal language of colour, texture, and emotional truth.
